Water hose timers come in one of two versions: mechanical, or digital. Mechanical hose timers don't use batteries. With these devices, you walk up to the hose, turn a dial to set it for however long you desire the water to be on, and walk away. It'll start the water immediately and cut it off when that time is done.

We replaced it with the Orbit 62061N-91213 Single Dial Water Timer, which seems to be much sturdier.

Functionally, the Orbit is better in one other respect: It's manual setting allows you to have it water for a certain number of minutes and then turn off automatically; the Vigoro requires you to
